I am responsible...

When anyone, anywhere, reaches out for help,

I want the hand of A.A. always to be there,

And for that I am responsible.

Getting Through the Holidays

I walked through the doors of AA for my first meeting (a Traditions meeting, no less) two weeks before Thanksgiving, three weeks before my 40th birthday and six weeks before Christmas. Not to mention another pending holiday many AA members affectionately call Amateur Night: New Year's Eve. Although I was by no means brimming with enthusiasm for the "AA way of life," I was extremely grateful to hear a lot of practical sharing in meetings about how to get through the holidays and all the seasonal festivities without picking up a drink. Or, for that matter, how to get through a day, any day, without picking up a drink. Both seemed highly improbable propositions for a drunk like me. I couldn't remember the last time twenty-four hours came and went without a drink.

What I heard was a powerful mix of the practical and the spiritual, like the program of AA itself. Go to a meeting. Talk to your sponsor or another recovering alcoholic. Rely on a power greater than yourself. Go to the party late and leave early. Get a soda and never let it leave your hand. Ask someone to go with you. Don't get too hungry, angry, lonely or tired. Help another alcoholic. Go to another meeting.

This was all startlingly new to me and I was thankful that people were making a special effort to share on this topic (I thought it was just for me...) during a season that can pose a particular challenge for the alcoholic, newcomer and old-timer alike. The holidays no doubt present their special challenges. Alcohol is flowing and it's a family disease. Sometimes it can feel a little like just "getting through" them. But today, after a few seasons of self-inflicted alcoholic anxiety, I have learned to enjoy the holidays and view them, as the 12th -Step essay says of life, not as something "to be endured or mastered." Thanks to the program I have learned to experience the sturdy joy of a sober holiday, the true spirit of giving thanks, the freshness of new beginnings and the welcome glow of light in a sometimes darkened world, all the time remembering, first and foremost, that I am an alcoholic. Along with the challenges, certainly, there is also the opportunity to reconnect with gratitude for the second chance at life AA has given me. After all, as a recovering alcoholic I have suggestions, tools, principles, steps, traditions, the fellowship of AA and a higher power to help me live life on a daily basis, whether it's a holiday or just another manic Monday. So, when the calendar advances and the sharing turns to "how to get through the holidays," I always remember those early days and the gift the members of AA gave me by keeping it simple and sharing what I needed to hear when I needed to hear it. It was the holiday present I needed most.

Many newcomers now face their first holiday season without a drink and, thanks to AA, each has the chance to discover, as I did, that they don't have to pick up a drink today and that a holiday is not something to be endured or mastered.

My Experience As Corrections Representative For My Home Group

At my sponsor's suggestion, I took the commitment to be my home group's corrections representative, and I'm really glad I did. The first order of business was to attend meetings of the New York Inter-Group Manhattan Corrections and Treatment Facilities Committee meeting. With the help of the committee's chair & co-chair, I selected the prison to which I hoped to carry AA meetings. I brought a recommendation to my home group's business meeting, and it was made group conscience. The group conscience was to have co-chairs who would alternate in taking the monthly AA meeting to the facility. At that very meeting, two group members volunteered to undertake the commitments.

I had to do some research to figure out how to fulfill the prison's requirements for volunteers. Before a volunteer can bring a meeting into this prison, they're required to get a tuberculosis test, which requires two trips. You get a skin prick one day, and go back exactly two days later for the results. If you're negative, you can go on to the next step. Group conscience was that I find a clinic that gives free tests, and I did.

Then, volunteers go to the prison to get fingerprinted and fill out the forms so the prison can run a background check, which can take as much as two weeks. Once volunteers have been cleared, and have completed a two-hour orientation, they can start taking AA meetings into the facility.

My commitment eventually required me to find volunteers by posting flyers and making announcements at AA meetings. I had to find an organization that offers free TB Tests, and schedule the fingerprinting and orientations, which are done at different locations.

The prison I work with is very AA-friendly, which is not always the case. No matter how supportive the institution is, we have vastly different goals. Our priority is to "carry the message to the still suffering alcoholic" and, at the end of the day, theirs is to wind up with the same number of prisoners that they started with. By this time I had done the hard part, and replicating my effort seemed pretty simple, so I asked my group if they'd be open to two meetings, one on the first and one on the second Thursday of each month. My home group and the prison gave me the go-ahead, which meant two more co-chairs were needed--and needed to go through this entire process.

Before my year-long commitment was finished, the prison administration asked if my group would bring in two additional meetings on Mondays and Tuesdays, so every inmate would have an opportunity to attend an AA meeting. I took this request to my home group's business meeting, and providing the additional meetings became group conscience. I then needed four additional volunteers who needed to go through all the steps required for orientation. Everyone who takes it on loves this service. We recognize that "there, but for the grace of God, go I," because we, too, could have ended up behind bars. One of my volunteers was once incarcerated in the correctional facility to which he now brings meetings.

So many of the suggestions we're given in AA carry with them hidden benefits. It's said that: "AA is talk therapy." That's why it's commonly suggested that we get numbers and call several sober alcoholics every day—and some may then become part of our support group. This commitment required me to call eleven other alcoholics regularly—my volunteers, my alternate and New York Inter-Group's Manhattan corrections chair and co-chair. It's not a coincidence that my mental state and spiritual condition were improved by the inevitable "talk therapy" that found its way into our conversations. Add to that the benefit of having eleven solidly sober people's numbers, which I wouldn't have had otherwise, in my cell phone - and it's clear how valuable this service has been for me: I doubled the number of members of my support group.

It's been a lot of work, and I couldn't have managed it, or maintained a presence at all the meetings, without the invaluable help of my alternate, Danielle. And guess what? She's become a good, sober friend!

By accepting a commitment I sent myself a clear message that I was committed to my own recovery. It boosted my self-esteem to perform esteemable acts, and it placed me in the rooms of AA more often—to give my volunteers packets of literature for their prison meetings, and to find new volunteers as they were needed. And, best of all, I was able to give back what was so freely given to me, by carrying the message to the still-suffering alcoholic, which is important enough to be half of our Twelfth Step.

A caller asks:

I am newly sober...

IG volunteer: AA, can I help you?

Caller: I've been sober for a year and a half and I am so bored - no clubs, no parties, no fun. My sponsor said I should call you and find out what's going on. Can you help me?

IG volunteer: Yes, I can. We have a full calendar of events, all aimed at carrying the AA message through New York Inter-Group's service committees. It has been our experience that doing this kind of service lets us meet more AA members and have a much more interesting life.

Caller: Last year was my first sober holiday season, and it was awful! What should I do this year?

IG volunteer: NY Inter-Group keeps a list of holiday activities put on by the area AA groups. Activities include alkathons, dances, group-anniversary celebrations, parties and open houses. Call the inter-group office and simply ask what special events have been planned.

Caller: Ever since I stopped drinking, I feel so self-conscious at any kind of social event

IG volunteer: Most of us felt that way at first. It helped to find out that other people feel the same way. We felt safe and we found that it got easier to go to social events.

Caller: What else can I do?

IG volunteer: Volunteers are needed to answer the phones at NY Inter-Group 365 days a year. There are likely to be more calls at this time of year. It is vital that there always be a sober AA member at the other end of the line to offer help and hope. Every day, about a dozen volunteers are needed to fully staff the phone lines in three shifts which run from morning until 10 PM.

Caller: What do I do – just walk in?

IG volunteer: Visitors are always welcome – this is your inter-group. Volunteers need to attend an orientation and sign up in the phone-volunteers' scheduling book.

Caller: Is anything special planned for New Year's Eve?

IG volunteer: Yes. There's an open house at NY Inter-Group on New Year's Eve, and all-night alkathons – in English and Spanish. Many AA groups hold special events, as well. The phone volunteers maintain and update the list of events planned for the holiday season.

Are your name and number on file at New York Inter-Group for Twelfth-Step calls?

Service: The Gift That Keeps Giving

On Tuesday evenings, I take an AA meeting to Arthur Kill Correctional Facility on Staten Island. This is a medium-security facility under the New York State Department of Correctional Services (familiarily known as DOCS). This is a men's facility, so imagine my amazement when I was invited to join the New Birth Awareness Group AA Meeting! There are meetings on Sunday (open discussion), Tuesday (Big Book), Thursday (12 Steps and 12 Traditions). The facility would like to open a Saturday-afternoon meeting, too, whose format has not been formalized. Last Tuesday, I was waiting for the "count to clear," which allows time for head count of all inmates before "movement" is called, when it is time to walk to designated areas (like in the old days of school when the bell rang between class periods). I started reading "AA Around the World," one of the several books I was bringing to the group. The stories are truly inspirational. It was when this book was first introduced at the 2000 International Convention in Minneapolis that I purchased it. At the meeting, we read all of the prefaces, up to the "Doctor's Opinion" of AA from the Big Book. Then we opened the meeting for what was lively and enlightening discussion. The energy these folks bring to the meetings is uplifting. I become the only female member to claim the New Birth Awareness Group as a second home group. What a joy and a privilege! On my way home from these meetings, whatever was bothering me on the way to the meeting has long since ceased to matter. For a priceless gift that keeps on giving, I recommend getting a second home group! I am right-sized, with my fellow members of the New Birth Awareness Group!
